Academic Team suffers loss of first-place award

by Kaushik Datta

The Academic Team has recently been stripped of a first-place trophy at the BRITE academic competition. In addition, they lost a $4000 first-place prize and a trip to Houston for a national tournament.

When asked about the loss, junior Manish Nag replied, "We were ahead after the first round, but the second round just killed us."

The BRITE competition finals were held on April 30 in Bridgewater, New Jersey. The Academic Team was initially declared the winner of the competition, in which they defeated St. Joseph's High School by a score of 900 to 880.

Toronto or Montreal?

However, one question concerning the largest city in Canada was still disputed. Mr. Jack Ruhl, the moderator of the event, initially ruled East Brunswick incorrect in responding "Montreal." St.

Joe's won the question on a steal by answering "Toronto." But, after consulting an outdated 1983 source, Mr. Ruhl found E.B. to be accurate in their response.

"We probably would have done the same thing."

However, the St. Joe's team telephoned the Canadian Embassy that evening and found that their answer on the steal was, indeed, correct. They notified the BRITE officials and were consequently awarded the first-place prize with a win of 890 to 870 points.

East Brunswick was forced to settle for the second-place title and a $3000 donation to the school.

Mark Staloff, a sophomore on the team, stated, "I was personally a little disappointed. But if we were in their spot, we probably would have done the same thing. I thought that we should have a rematch, but it's up to St. Joe's on whether or not we should have one."

"They deserve to win."

"The ruling was unfair. The decision had already been made, and it wasn't right to change it. Plus, the question itself was misleading. They didn't judge the size of the cities according to metropolitan areas, but the size of the cities according to other ways," added Rom Kim, co-captain of the Academic Team.

Mr. Martin Bordak, Academic Team advisor, stated, "We can argue legalities, but let's get down to the facts: their response was correct and ours wasn't. They deserve to win."

Senior Class President Harris Aaron and Treasurer Nabila Dahod Wala participate in a class council fundraiser.

New class council elected

by Lara Parker

Junior and Senior Class Council elections were recently held for the 1992-1993 school year.

Presiding over the Senior Council will be President Harris Aaron, Vice President Heidi Tanania, Secretary Richard DeGuzman, and Treasurer Nabila Dahodwala. Harris, Nabila, and Rich are incumbents from their junior year.

This will be Harris's third term as President of the Class Council in addition to serving on the Student Council Executive Board for the past two years. Harris said, "I am looking forward to running a successful prom and uniting the people within the grade to have the best senior class ever!" He is also "looking forward to continuing successful events such as Homecoming hall decorating, the Baseball Card Show, and Game Show Night."

Nabila, who participates in various other activities such as track, piano and karate, and does volunteer work at St. Peter's Hospital, admitted, "I did not expect to win last year." With regard to the present class council, Nabila commented, "We organized well and worked well together."

*****

Next year's Junior Class Council will consist of President Andrea Olan, Vice President Jennifer Leavitt, Secretary Allison Frankel, and Treasurer Heather Morgan.

"We hope to form a committee [that] will work with the elected officers," said Mrs. Laverne Bauer, class advisor.

Class advisor Mrs. Carole Rosenberg added, "We did well as a sophomore class. [However], it was hard because we had to get the council together late in the year."

Jennifer Leavitt, presently the Sophomore Class Secretary, stated, "This year, the other officers and [I] came up with some great ideas for next year. I plan to carry out these ideas in the best and most effective way possible."

Sophomore Marci Morgenstern was pleased with the overall election results and is optimistic. "I think next year will be very successful because now we will have more experience and more ideas," she said.

Stahl speaks for students

by Todd Dubinsky

Kenny Stahl was elected as Student Council Liaison this past May and will become active for the 1992-1993 school year.

"The primary function of the Student Council Liaison is to attend all of the East Brunswick Board of Education meetings and to serve as a representative of the students," explained Kenny.

During meetings held twice a month, Board members question the liaison about certain school-related issues.

"Although I don't have a vote, during regular sessions I generally get a chance to speak," he commented.

When asked why he won the elections, Kenny stated, "I've been in the school system forever, so I know my class and they know me. Many people are aware of my experiences in Institute for Political and Legal Education (IPLE) and Model United Nations."

As an Eagle Scout and East Brunswick Chapter President of B'nai B'rith Youth Organization, Kenny learned essential leadership skills. Another activity which enriched him educationally was participating as a lawyer on the Mock Trial team.

Kenny feels he can make a difference on the board. However, he commented, "Nothing I say is going to make any difference unless it gets through [Principal Charles] King and [unless] I have his approval first." This leads him to the conclusion, "The most important aspect of the job is to negotiate with Mr. King."

"I've had some doubts after I won the election because people were going to be expecting me to do things I couldn't possibly do," Kenny admitted. "I am [the Board's] guest and have limited power."

Kenny argues that the hat policy is a "frivolous matter" and "played out too much." However, he stated, "The administration should publish some kind of explanation for the hat policy, especially since they received such negative response from the students."

"I believe a liaison can work, but communication is essential. I'm going to discuss with Mr. King if there can be a Student Liaison mailbox for comments."

What's Inside

The end of the school year has arrived, and with it comes the final issue of The Clarion for the 1991-1992 school year. This year is our traditional "Senior Issue," with several pages having been devoted to pictures and messages of the Class of 1992, as well as the results of our Senior polls.

Included in this issue is a feature on Varnell Johnson, our Athlete of the Year, as well as a wrap-up of the Year in Sports. Our editorials cover AP Exams and the Senior Servant Auction.

Senior Servant Auction should promote charity

The Senior Servant Auction is a school function which promotes spirit and fun—two meaningful goals. However, the real purpose behind its annual establishment has been lost. When the Senior Servant Auction was first introduced in 1988, the proceeds were donated to a charitable fund, a child abuse foundation. Yet, somewhere down the line, the ultimate goal has lost its direction. Instead, the funds raised now go into the pot for the Senior Class Prom.

Why, then, is this school function endorsed and carried out by the Student Council—a group designed to represent the entire student body? Having the Student Council promote the auction is a gross misrepresentation of the entire event. If the Student Council is involved, the activity should benefit all grades since there are representatives for each grade on the committee. However, if the money collected is only being used to further the budget of the senior class, then here's a modest proposal: have the Senior Class Council handle the event.

For example, the volleyball marathon sponsored by the sophomores is organized by the Sophomore Class Council, and thus, the money collected goes to the treasury of the sophomore class. In addition, a flower sale for the senior class is also organized by the Senior Class Council; therefore, the seniors deserve the money to add to their prom savings. Yet, the Carnival organized by the Student Council is for the enjoyment of the whole school.

The Senior Servant Auction should continue. The spirit and fun, bidding and selling, laughter and cheer are much welcomed. But the efforts of Student Council are wasted when only the seniors benefit from the proceeds. We all wish the seniors a very glorious prom, but echoing in the distance is the cry of an abused child in need.

TIPS ON SAVING THE EARTH

by Lori Kahn

For the last issue of the 1991-92 Clarion...excuse me, I'm sorry—the tears keep rolling...anyway, we just wanted to give you a bunch of useful tips that will help make the world a better place.

When buying any type of product, we should be aware of the company's environmental policy. Companies that encourage recycling, alternative energy sources, waste reduction, utilization of biodegradable materials in packaging, and natural ingredients for food are deemed acceptable in our book.

For those of us who are chocolate/candy lovers, our best bet is one of the following sweets: Bar None, 5th Avenue, Hershey Bar, Hershey Kiss, Kit Kat, Krackel, Mr. Goodbar, Reese's, Rolo, Skor, Twizzler's, or a Whatchamacallit...am I making you hungry?

As you all know, breakfast is very essential to our daily routine. We need to eat to concentrate on those calculus derivatives. So opt for the environmentally-conscious companies' cereals such as All-Bran, Apple Jacks, Bran Flakes, Cap'n Crunch, Cocoa or Rice Krispies, Corn Pops, Corn Flakes, Cracklin' Oat Bran, Crispix, Froot Loops, Frosted Flakes, Frosted Mini Wheats, Honey Smacks, Just Right, Life, Muesli, Nut & Honey Crunch, Nutri-Grain, Oh's, Product 19, Quaker, Raisin Bran, or Special K.

For those of us who love the microwave, buy frozen products from Celeste, Eggo, Moore's, and Weight Watchers.

If anyone is interested in learning about other types of products such as beverages, cosmetics, gum, etc., pick up a copy of Shopping for a Better World by The Council on Economic Priorities.

Beyond The Yellow Gate

by Lynda Tsai

Normally, I hate nostalgia. But this is my last column, and the time has come for me to say goodbye (for the summer...zucchini, I promise you this...)

All right, so Dom Deluise isn't your favorite commercial chef. But anyway...

Kleptomania. You've read about it, you've seen it happen, you've suffered through it (!?!?).

But... have you been victimized by it? (oooooooooh...)

Yes, this has happened at Manasquan High School in Manasquan, NJ. According to Blue & Gray, everything from sneakers to books are being stolen.

Wait a sec... BOOKS? Yeah, sure, whatever makes them happy.

By the way, my math book is in nine hall (locker #263, the combination is...)

*****

Speaking of hallways (were we really? I dunno...), did you know that some schools have decided to name their hallways?

I kid you not. A "Global Hallways Proposal" is being considered at Newton North High School in Newtonville, Mass.

Under this proposal, the music department at the school would be known as the Mozart Floor and the science hall would be the Isaac Newton Hall. I'd give more examples, but this sounds like a big school.

According to one of the housemasters there, to "have names of influential people like Ben Franklin and Leonard Bernstein around you is incredible. Seeing important names around you all the time affects your goals and aspirations."

Really? Osmosis works well there.

I wonder what they call the faculty restrooms and storage closets...

What would you do to earn a few course credits?

Would you build a house? Would you learn carpentry? Would you ask the New York State Department of Social Services for nearly $1 million? (Trust me, this is going somewhere.)

Students at Bronx Regional High School in South Bronx accomplished this last year. While converting an abandoned building into a shelter for homeless teenagers, the carpentry students received credit for a nine-week construction course.

Cool... I wonder if we could ask the same from Governor Florio.

But then again...

*****

Attention to all bead-lovers (this includes hippie and Hare Krishna fans): be careful of what you wear inside Wilbur Cross High School in New Haven, CT. Beads have been banned at this school.

According to The Proclamation, the beads have been identified with certain gangs.

Ok... what next? Hats?

Well, that's all, folks. This has been an interesting experience for me. May the force be with you...

Are AP exams fair?

While the intense focus on grades is long over for most seniors, a small group of twelfth graders has just recently earned the right to relax. These are Advanced Placement (AP) students, who have just taken their AP Exams, each three hours long and analogous to the final of a college course. If they score well on these grueling tests, they will be awarded college credit. For those unintimidated students who can persevere the extra months of studying, the AP's are a good thing.

The process of taking these exams, though, is much different than taking finals in college. In the latter, classes end at least four days before the tests start, allowing students to study without any academic distractions. However, in high school, there is no such "reading period;" all classes, with all their assignments and obligations, are not suspended during AP Exams. This forces many students to sacrifice their high school grades in order to study for the AP's. On the other hand, potential college credit is sacrificed in order to complete that term paper.

This system is extremely unfair for AP students. Just studying for the exams is hard enough; why complicate the matter with tests, homework, and projects? If the exams are supposed to be analogous to college finals, so should the testing procedure. The administration should temporarily suspend all other academic obligations for AP students during the testing period. While it would be impossible to suspend most extracurricular activities during this time (as is done in college), this would still give students the time to prepare.

While the school prides itself on encouraging academic excellence, it also seems to pride itself on the ability of its students to achieve while heavily burdened. The AP Exams are hard enough by themselves; there is no reason why preparing for them should be more stressful than taking them.

If you read this article, you will receive a free trip to Hawaii with either Sharon Stone or Tom Cruise. First you have to finish this article, which is about some exciting clubs. Okay, the trip was just an attention-grabber. However, I know you will want to read it anyway.

To begin with, the Math Club has been very busy recently. The club won the Middlesex County championship and finished second in the state in the New Jersey Math League Competition. Members took a series of math tests from October to April. The top five scorers counted towards the team score, and they included Anthony Tsai, Tin-Sung Hung, Yi-Jin Tang, Saurabh Jha, Ron Kim, and Ed So. Anthony said, "The tests were interesting, but hard. You needed a good application of math skills to do well." The club also put out a booklet containing math formulas, and sold it, the money going to charity.

Another club which achieved success was the Future Homemakers of America (FHA). During the FHA state convention in early April, Jocelyn So and Que-Chi

Tran were elected state officers. The two along with Jerome You, finished in first place for their All-state project.

Another busy club has been the Musician's Club. Two times a month, the club performs all types of music in the auditorium. President Dina Christopher said, "It gives people an opportunity to perform, who may not have a chance otherwise." The most recent performance took place in mid-May with Amy Erenrich and Megan Glover.

Other interesting happenings in the club world include the Marching Band and Students Against Violating the Environment (SAVE) marching in the Memorial Day parade. SAVE also sold refreshments to raise money. Earlier in May, the Marching Band sponsored a flea market in Parking Lot A.

The National Honor Society sponsored a blood drive in the sub-gym on June 8th.

The foreign language clubs have also been busy. The Spanish Club had a festival, the French Club competed at Rider college on May 20th, and the Latin Club had a banquet on June 11th.

This column is dedicated to honoring a select group of juniors who have been recognized with various awards and opportunities for their hard work and accomplishments.

*****

Rachel Stark was the recipient of the Governor's Award in Arts Education. She was nominated by the Arts Foundation of New Jersey in recognition of her work at the Summer Arts Institute in art and technology (photography). Rachel will be honored at a ceremony with Governor Florio on June 2.

*****

Our own Sports Editor, Amy Erenrich, won a writing award and honorable mention from the New Jersey Presswomen. Amy had entered two articles in the writing competition and soon received notice that she had won. However, she did not know which article won or what the prize was. Amy found out when she attended an awards ceremony on May 15. She was given honorable mention for her article about Bryan Fortay in the November 1991 issue of The Clarion. She also won second place and a $15 cash award for

"To Letter or Not To Letter: The Varsity Question," from the April 1991 issue.

*****

Marsha Sapon and Debbie Shansky were given awards for Excellence in Acting on May 6. They received their awards after performing the courtroom scene of the school production of The Crucible in a competition at Middlesex County College.

*****

Carol Morgan won the opportunity to attend the Girls' Career Institute at Douglass College, Rutgers University from June 15-18. Carol applied for admission to the program and was chosen by a group of teachers at EBHS. At Douglass, Carol will learn about careers and opportunities that are open to women and meet other students from all over the state. Ronni Astroff was chosen as the alternate.

Carrie Goldstein will spend the summer in Sweden on a scholarship through the Youth For Understanding program, based in Washington, D.C. Various companies sponsor this program, such as Johnson & Johnson, where Carrie's mother works. At the beginning of December, she completed an extensive application consisting of nine essays and other general information. In March, Carrie was notified that she made the semifinals. At that point, she had a three-and-a-half hour interview and was required to write two more essays. Finally, over spring break, Carrie found out that she won. Why did Carrie go through all the trouble to apply? "It sounded like an excellent, once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," she said.

On May 9, Neal Kwiat, James Stapleton, Douglas Mikulin, and Gregory Myhre became Eagle Scouts, the highest possible rank in the Boy Scouts. Each boy was required to create an Eagle community service project. Neal and Douglas devoted their energy to preventing soil erosion, and Douglas also improved animal habitats at the Community Beach. Greg landscaped the area around the YMCA, and James built benches for the convenience of outdoorsmen at the Community Beach.

As the year is finally ending, sophomores everywhere are eagerly anticipating the shedding of their sophomoreism. While on this subject, we may as well add some thoughts. Although it is true that some sophomores are a tiny bit immature and may not be aware of their surroundings, must the term "sophomore" be so abused that it actually becomes a derogatory adjective? It is not every sophomore girl's dream to be led to the prom on the arm of "some senior." And there is a good point to riding the school bus—no gas money; it's free! (Bet you never thought of that, hee, hee.) And there must be, somewhere, somehow, some junior or even (gasp) a senior who acts their shoe size instead of their age. Enough of that for now. Here's the (very sparse) sophomore news.

The halls are just "ringing" with cries of, "Will you turn my ring? That's 73."

Yes, a lot of us have received our class rings, sure to be of great sentimental value for years to come. (Did you know that you can give it back as down payment for your college ring?) Anyway, those ornamented hands all look just dandy.

*****

Remember that well-advertised volleyball tournament? Guess what! A reliable source informed us that (we gotcha this time) it was actually a sophomore fundraiser. So were those little catalog-things full of jewelry and potpourri. So was that darling little marriage booth at the Student Council Carnival. Boy, oh boy, the money is just pouring in, n'est-ce pas?

Now back to our original subject. As aforesaid, we are breaking the chains of the cruel sophomore world and plunging into the world of juniority. But try not to forget your best sophomore moments—for instance, the day you tripped over your shoelace in nine hall and everyone shouted, "Sophomore!"

Or how 'bout the time you asked that senior for directions to the pool and you ended up in Pas-saic? Well, now you know that there really isn't a pool, but don't forget to tell next year's sophs that it's at the end of twelve hall.

P.S. Where is that elevator, anyway? Don't ask us. We're only sophomores.

Seelinger wins national writing honors

by Mark Staloff

This past fall, the National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE) recognized senior Kim Seelinger as one of the finest student writers in the nation. The citation was the result of a contest organized by the NCTE that Kim participated in last year.

Kim first heard about the contest from English teacher Steven Redman in the beginning of her junior year. That autumn she submitted five prepared selections consisting of an essay, an original paragraph, and a variety of poetry. In March of 1991 this was followed by a seventy-five minute timed essay on the progress of women's rights. "I took a lot of risks...I wrote a really informal essay," said Kim. "Also, I didn't have enough time to add a closing."

Despite her worries, Kim was selected as one of several hundred winners across the country. The award is recognized by most colleges and universities as a symbol of the student's advanced writing ability. Kim's Creative Writing teacher, Mr. John Pember, said, "I think [Kim's] writing is very mature for a high school student; it reflects her travels and experiences."

Surprisingly, Kim does not consider writing as one of her primary hobbies. Although she has been writing short stories and poetry since elementary school, Kim has since devoted herself more and more to her other interests. Through IPLE, she has been a participant in both Model Congress and Model United Nations. She is also president of French Club, an editor of Folio, a member of the Clarion writing staff, and a coordinator of the National Honor Society Blood Drive. Kim is athletic as well; she plays varsity field hockey while enjoying swimming and volleyball at home. In addition, she spends time tutoring students at Hammar-skjold. Senior Danielle Schweiloch commented, "What is amazing is that Kim is dedicated to so many different activities, yet she is able to find time for all of them. She is really good at balancing her work."

Next year, Kim will be studying in the University of Virginia Honors Program where she plans to study English, French, and political science. She chose that school because "its English department is among the finest in the country."

After college, Kim hopes to join the Peace Corps and work in sub-Saharan Africa, where she plans to write children's books about growing up in Africa. Once she leaves the Peace Corps, her dream is to live in a cottage in Corsica along a beach where she can write at her leisure.

Five to attend Governor's School

by Raj Chand

This summer, five East Brunswick High School students will be among the few in the state to attend Governor's School.

Governor's School is the name of the program in which exceptionally talented rising seniors attend several different schools for one month during the summer. Governor's School programs include the School of Public Issues, School of the Environment, School of Science, and School of the Arts.

Since only 100 students statewide are selected to attend each school, the entrance process into the Governor's Schools is extremely competitive. Students must first apply through East Brunswick High School, where a maximum of two students for each school are chosen to become candidates. From there, the final decisions are made by the county and then the state.

This year, the following EBHS students will attend the Governor's School of their choice: Michael Padhi at the School of Public Issues; Tara Herman and Judy Tsai at the School of the Environment; Swati Dutta Roy and Zoltan Maliga at the School of Science; and Emmanuel King at the School of the Arts.

Students who are accepted into the Governor's School program want to go there for a variety of reasons, but education and experience are cited repeatedly. Zoltan Maliga mentioned slightly different reasons. He stated, "I really have nothing better to do during the summer. [Since] there's free food, free housing, and educational reasons, I guess I might learn something." Judy Tsai added, "I think it's a really good chance to meet people that have the same interests as you. Basically, it's just a really fun way to spend the summer."

The week of April 27 was better known to students as Earth Week, with SAVE (Students Against Violating the Environment) members setting up displays and contests in the cafeteria during all lunch periods.

The theme for this year's Earth Week was recycling. Among the activities were a can-tossing contest; the distribution of environmental pamphlets; and the sale of T-shirts, buttons, and tote bags with SAVE's new logo. A raffle for prizes was conducted for all students who recycled correctly.

On Wednesday, April 29, elementary students came to EBHS for an Arbor Day celebration. They were entertained by music while a tree was planted next to the soccer field. Each student was also given a tree of their own to plant.

Throughout the week, movies were shown for SAVE members and classmates. Each movie dealt with an environmental theme. Among the movies were The Naked Gun 2 1/2 and Lois Gibbs and the Love Canal.

SAVE member Aaron Uydess felt that Earth Week was a success. "It let people know more about how to recycle and gave them a more comfortable feeling about recycling since there is more information on the garbage cans [in the cafeteria]."

Carnival provides fun

by Emmanuel King

A school-sponsored event?? These four words probably strike terror into the minds of many an EBHS student, but the recent Student Council Carnival wasn't half-bad. OK, so we could have used a little more cooperation from Mr. Sunshine.

For those of you who didn't attend, the carnival was basically a chance for each of the clubs to run a booth of their choice and promote themselves. It was held in the driving range on Friday, May 15, and numerous clubs, from FHA to orchestra, chose to attend.

Some of the events were...interesting, to say the least. For instance, Latin Club held a "Stab Julius Caesar" booth and German Club had "Knock Down the Berlin Wall." Hmm...

The two most popular areas seemed to be the teacher-dunking and the Key Service Organization hot pretzel/Italian ice stand. Among the brave faculty members who volunteered to be dunked—and dunked they were—including Mr. Ben Tantillo, Mr. "Bo" Henning, Mr. Dan Moran, Mr. Harry Morris, and Ms. Lenore Kingsmore. The students shelled out plenty of cash to soak their favorite(?) teachers, who added to the fun by taunting their assailants good-naturedly.

All in all, the carnival was a mild success. As Eric Albrecht, Junior Class Co-treasurer, put it, "It could have been a lot bigger and better in terms of organization...[but] I have no doubt that this trial run will be invaluable to us in the future." Sophomore Council member Ken Krantz hinted, "If it's successful, it may be a half-day event next year."

The "real truth" behind Model UN

by Sue Kim

It's a club. It's a class. It's...it's...it's Model UN! Actually, if you want to join this "ninth period class," you have to go to your guidance counselor and sign up for International Studies. Still, it's not your average class. Model UN is a two-and-a-half HONORS credit course (just kind of rolls off your tongue, doesn't it?), that meets about every other Wednesday after school. What more could you ask for? Well, there are the position papers, speeches, working papers, and resolutions which you'll have to write. If you don't know what those things are, don't be alarmed. No one knows what they're doing the first time. (Actually, I've been to three, and I'm still pretty clueless—but maybe that's just me.)

Basically, what you do at the conferences is act out the role of a United Nations delegate. You are assigned a country, whose policies you have to research, and a committee, where you discuss topics of international concern. That's what they'll tell you, anyway...

Once you get to committee, things seem a bit different. You'll meet three kinds of people. The A-type is the overzealous, there for awards, doesn't really know what he's talking about, annoying delegate. (E.B. falls into this category.) The A-type often appears to know what he's doing, and, if he does, he'll stab you in the back first chance he gets.

We shall sum up the B-type's reason for attending Model UN, as well as their whole calling in life, in two words—MEAT MARKETS. They must seem shy at first because they don't speak during debate, but, trust me, they're friendly enough. (E.B. is included in this category, as well.)

All leftovers are in the C-type category. This includes the few who really know what they're doing (remember, don't trust them) and those who are only there to get out of school and couldn't care less about what is going on. (Of course, this includes our students.)

Anyhow, before long, the room will become very hot, the debating will become very boring, and someone will motion for a caucus. That is when everyone goes outside and talks. It is especially important in caucusing to exhibit diplomacy, the act of lulling other delegates into a false sense of security by making them think you support them. Then you write a resolution using their ideas but you put your country's name at the top. And you bring home the awards.

It may sound pretty cruel, but that's how Model UN works. To sum it up, you sit in these stuffy rooms with sweaty people and no windows from eight o'clock in the morning to 11:30 at night, with one break for lunch and one break for dinner, arguing and flashing false smiles. Gosh, it's fun.

Dittman and Brautman aim for Broadway

by Shalini Ramasunder

While the rest of us only dream of one day becoming a famous director, junior Heather Brautman and senior Kevin Dittman are already on their way to success.

On May 28, 1992, both Heather and Kevin each presented their self-written and directed plays at the Joseph P. Hayes competition on Long Beach Island. Each play was then critiqued by a panel of judges.

According to junior Stacey Jacobs, Heather's play, "Weird and Exotic Interludes from the Land Down Under," describing the unfair consequences of being the devil, "definitely has a chance of winning for the most original play." Heather, however, feels that just seeing her work being performed is reward enough.

Kevin's play, "The Rebellious Characterization of Ness Shallow," presents a fictional character's revolt against his playwright. Junior Aaron Ydessa, the leading actor in Kevin's play, feels that it, too, "has a good chance of winning for originality or best written...or maybe even best leading actor!"

Upon being asked what it was like to direct a play, Heather explains its difficulties. "I find it really hard to give orders to people my own age."

The cast hardly seems to mind. "Heather is doing a very good job," comments sophomore Carl Entin.

"Yeah, I think that she's really organized...and her dedication is making it easy to put together a good play. Besides, working for someone our own age is 10,000 times better than working for an adult director," adds Meredith Bergman, a sophomore.

Also impressed by the directors' work, sophomore Patti Murtha agrees. "Heather and Kevin don't talk down to us;

Students gear up for Summer '92

by Hilary Maugham

Once more it's the time of year that all students in all schools look forward to. It's summertime! And, as usual, the only thing on people's minds is VACATION!!!

Vacation plans seem to vary greatly. There are the many unfortunate students who will spend their summer right here in beautiful East Brunswick, New Jersey. People such as sophomore Adam Neary will spend time doing summer theater, and people such as Joel Lynn, a junior, will spend time working and terrorizing the town with his driving. Then there are the lucky ones.

Junior Faith Passy probably has the best trip planned. For the first part of the summer, she plans to go to Russia, Poland, Austria, Germany, and Czechoslovakia.

When she gets back from there, she's going to see U2 in concert in Giants Stadium. Wow!

Sophomore Adina Bricker has a heavy itinerary planned as well. She hopes to get a job; see Paula Abdul, Richard Marx, and Dolly Parton in concert; and go to Florida. (She'll be out man-hunting, too!) Another sophomore, Dana Gorman, plans such things as getting a job (see a pattern?); working as a counselor; going to Ocean City, Maryland; and "going for four days to cheerleading camp."

Other students have more intellectual pursuits planned for the summer. David Schutzbank, a sophomore, means to pay a visit to Stanford University and St. Louis. And seniors all gave the same answer: "I'm preparing for college."

by Suzanne Klein and Rachel Rear

Well, summer's just around the corner, and that means PARTY!!! And, of course, party means... PIZZA!!! (How's that for logic?) We decided we'd order an array of (little) pizzas, eat a (little) bit of each, and report back to you, the peculiar pizza-pie eating populace of EBHS.

After perusing Rae's "The Key," we chose three places: Teresa's, Vinnie's, and Bella's. Well, kiddos, here goes!

TERESA'S—Delivery time: 33 minutes

Good points: arrived hot; has cheese, tomato sauce, and (surprise! surprise!) a crust.

Bad points: too much cheese (which made Sue slightly nauseous), tomato sauce tastes canned, and the crust is thick and soft. Oh, and it has way too much garlic. But, according to Rae's sis, pre-frosh Laura, "Hey, it's good chilled, too!" (She got leftovers.)

VINNIE'S—Delivery time: 21 minutes

Good points: thin crust; crisp, savory sauce.

Bad points: top of crust (handle?) is about as tender as a rawhide chew toy. Note: This may be due to the fact that it arrived at a less-than-pleasurable temperature, and, therefore, sat in Rae's oven for a period of time.

BELLA'S—Delivery time: 68 minutes (Yes, folks, an hour and eight minutes. AN HOUR AND EIGHT MINUTES!!!!!!)

Good points: best crust of all three; the delivery man had an authentic Italian accent.

Bad points: rubber ("plastic") cheese, very flat and condensed.

Points of Interest:

1) Sue's neighbor delivered the pizza from Vinnie's, and he happened to arrive at the same time as the Teresa's guy. (They looked dumbfounded.) Rae quickly explained, "We're, ahm, writing an article."

2) We had no money, so we borrowed from Laura, the previously mentioned sibling.

3) It is next to impossible to drink directly from a refrigerator dispenser.

4) Stars out of five: Vinnie's—Rae-3.5, Sue-4, average-3.75; Bella's—Rae-3, Sue-2.5, average-2.75; Teresa's—Rae-1.5, Sue-1, average-1.25.

5) This makes (duh) Vinnie's the best.

6) We really like parentheses.

Tori Amos brings piano to '90s music

by Jennifer Tan

Elton John is dead. Tori Amos is John reincarnated. Tabloid headlines? No, just a comparison between two piano players, a breed of musicians rarely seen in rock nowadays, and Tori Amos's album takes full advantage of this talent. Besides comparisons with Elton John (who is, by the way, alive), Amos has also been hailed as a Canadian Kate Bush, but, where Bush mostly meanders in nebulous poetic images, Amos uses more accessible melody and descriptions to reveal a clearer picture. Little

Earthquakes shows a surprising maturity for a debut; it's a personal songscape that's introspective but never self-indulgent.

In this album, Amos mixes memorable choruses with dramatic orchestral arrangements, magnifying her child-like voice. The approach is catchy pop, as in "Crucify," a song about the struggle to speak out in the presence of stone-throwers. This message continues in the hum-along "Silent All These Years" (a.k.a. "The Repressed Woman's Anthem"). The title track possesses an Armageddon/

Euro-decadent aura, sounding like a hybrid of The Sound of Music mixed with some Nico (Velvet Underground). However, Amos's vast vocal range is a bit overdone in some cases, like in the overemotional and simply annoying "Mother," where she wails for seven unrelenting minutes.

Many songs deal with sterile relationships. In "Precious Things," Amos lashes out at "beautiful boys and pretty girls," and in the cheeky "Leather," probably her tribute to the Marquis de Sade (use your imagination), a cigar-puffing angel warns her "you're alone here so if you jump you best jump far."

Not all is hopeless, though. In "Winter," a father asks his child, "When you gonna love you as much as I do?" This lullaby of sorts will either charm you with its sentimental melody and unconditional love lyrics, or maybe you'll just lose your sugar cravings. (Or maybe it'll remind you of the ice-skating scene in Damien—Omen II.)

The feel-good music lasts only so long. Stripped of any instrumentation, Amos becomes a rape victim in "Me and a Gun." Carefully avoiding any feeling when she sings in a naked, cracking voice, Amos magnifies the woman's despair better than if she had bellowed and cried.

Overall, Little Earthquakes proves to be a masterful beginning for the gifted Tori Amos. With a line like "Do we soon forget the things we cannot see," you have to wonder for yourself. In her songs, Amos creates lyrics to ponder, music to hum.

All-American football player senior Varnell Johnson, also excels in track.

Athlete of the Year: Varnell Johnson

by Michelle Eng

Achieving excellence in three varsity sports is only a dream for most high school athletes. However, senior Varnell Johnson has left his mark on the basketball, football, and track teams.

Varnell's love for sports stems back to his childhood. Inspired by his mother, he began to play football at age eight and basketball at age ten. Although he began running track only two years ago, Coach William Tighe believes that Varnell "has a tremendous amount of potential. He is fast, very fast. He's a competitor."

This past season, Varnell received a lot of recognition for his performance as a tailback and free safety for the football team. In addition to being designated as the team captain, he was named to the first team Sentinel, first team All-State, first team All-County, first team Daily News, and was chosen by the Home News, as the Player of the Year.

Football coach Marcus Borden Said, "[Varnell is] one of the most intense players I've ever been around. He was the player that never gave up and he showed that in his desire and determination to keep going." Varnell works hard to stay in shape by practicing in the off-season and lifting weights during the summer.

Varnell was recruited for football by Boston College, Illinois, Miami, Rutgers, Syracuse, and the Milford Academy, a preparatory school. If his eligibility is confirmed, Varnell will attend Boston College on a scholarship. He said, "College has a lot to teach me. I have a lot to learn and a long way to go."

Coach Borden believes, "[Varnell will be] the next great [EBHS] star we'll see on a [college] football team."

AD Frank Noppenberger serves school and county

by Ajita Ranadive

Frank Noppenberger is known by most in the high school as the Bear's Athletic Director. However, Mr. Noppenberger, commonly referred to as "Mr. Nop," also serves as the Greater Middlesex County Conference President and Supervisor of the Physical Education Department in East Brunswick Schools.

Now in his fourth year as Athletic Director at EBHS and Churchill, Mr. Noppenberger interacts daily with coaches, athletes and athletic directors from other districts. Other responsibilities include scheduling games, hiring officials, arranging transportation, evaluating coaches, and supervising games and events.

In his first year as Supervisor of Physical Education for all East Brunswick Public Schools, Mr. Noppenberger evaluates gym teachers and makes sure that the physical education program is up to par. During his two year term as the Greater Middlesex County Conference President, Mr. Noppenberger oversees and directs games and meets in all areas of athletics.

Mr. Noppenberger's interest in athletics was evident when he was a teenager; he played varsity football, basketball, and baseball at South River High School. He went on to receive a B.S. from West Chester State University and a Masters Degree in physical education from Trenton State College. Before becoming the Supervisor of Athletics, Mr. Noppenberger was a physical education teacher and basketball coach at EBHS.

Mr. Noppenberger believes that the best part of his job is "getting to see and know student athletes of the entire sports program, and, at the same time, being able to appreciate hard work and dedication to their sports." As a former basketball coach, he explained, "[Coaches are] confined and cannot appreciate other sports as much." According to Mr. Nop, the only disadvantage of being the Athletic director is that "ninety percent of the time" is spent dealing solely with athletes, whereas, as a gym teacher, he interacted with the whole student body.

Mr. Noppenberger believes that East Brunswick's athletic program is successful primarily because of the hard work, dedication, and determination of its athletes and coaches. "It is also due to the support given by the non-athletes, faculty, Board of Education, and community youth programs," he explained.

Mr. Noppenberger takes a break from his many duties.

Students attack Up The Wall: New trend in EB leisure

by Bernice Yau

Up The Wall. Contrary to popular belief, it is not where your younger siblings drive you. It's a fresh, new indoor climbing facility which simulates outdoor mountain climbing.

Indoor climbing began its "climb" to fame in Europe during the early '80s. Four years later, the first American rock climbing gym opened in Seattle, Washington. Since that time, twenty other climbing spots have opened all over the country and numerous walls have been made available in colleges and health clubs.

Up The Wall, located in the Middlesex Gymnastics Academy, is the only commercial climbing facility in the metropolitan area. There is 2,000 square feet of climbing surface (twenty-one feet high), including a "Super Wall," designed for experienced climbers. The "Super Wall" defies convention with roofs, ledges, overhangs, and three-dimensional challenges.

Each wall is made from a ceramic, sandy, ridged rock with foot and hand holds. Cracks are inserted to simulate "the great outdoors."

If you're worried about safety, there's no need to be. A belay, or spotter, stands under the climber in case of any predicament he or she might discover themselves in. The climber and belay are entangled together in a mass of heavy ropes that prevent climbers from falling.

Wall climbing attracts a variety of people. According to the supervisors at Up The Wall, it is estimated that 50% of the climbers are students and 50% are adults.

The sport sounds like it would cost big bucks, but the prices are really affordable. For students with an ID, a three hour session is $6.00, and a two hour session is $4.00. If you fall in love with climbing, you can become a member of the climbing club for a $30.00 monthly fee. In addition, Up The Wall will give a free climb to those who just want to check it out.

Wall climbing is "an exciting and new fitness and sport activity," remarked Howard Bernstein, owner of Up The Wall. The popularity is soaring at an amazing rate that doesn't seem likely to stop. Karen Lam, a sophomore who has been to Up The Wall, commented, "It was a fun experience, and I would definitely recommend it to others."

BEARS' SPORTS: Year in Review

Fall sports revisited

by Evan Rosner and Judy Tsai

Boys Cross Country

Coached by Jack Brophy, the 1991 Boys cross country team ended their season with a 5-3 record. Key runners included senior co-captains Tony Yoseloff and George Stapleton, junior Zoltan Maliga, and sophomore Mike O'Reilly. Zoltan described his cross-country experience as "a good time with fun people." He explained, "You really develop a good bond [with other runners] from the suffering."

Girls Gymnastics

The girls gymnastics team had an outstanding season, posting a 10-1 record and winning the GMC Red Division Championship All-around gymnasts. Sophomore Dana Mennona, junior Meredith Garofalo, and senior Lauri Herbert, were keys to the team's success. Lauri, co-captain with senior Delia Hollierith, stated, "We had a very successful season, and had fun, and worked hard."

Football

Though the Bears lost the first four games of their season, they managed to finish with a 3-6 record. Although a number of players were sidelined with injuries for the better part of the season, senior co-captain Varnell Johnson more than compensated for this loss of manpower. "I am disappointed because of the injuries we had, but, because we worked hard to be competitive, we made some strides," stated coach Marcus Borden. Mr. Borden's high expectations for next year's team are vested in juniors Marty Lucarello and Jim Varick.

Girls Tennis

Consistency was the basis for the success of this year's Lady Bears Tennis Team (16-3). Coached by Karen Frezzi, they slammed their way through the GMC's, but fell in the finals to Marlboro. Though the girls advanced to the state semifinals, they were ultimately defeated by archrival J.P. Stevens. Though next year's team will lack the experience of graduating seniors Randi Lestz, Allison Hirsch, Sari Francis and Erica Kassan, sophomore Jana Scharf and freshman Rema Sukumaran are expected to lead the team.

Senior Rita Shah and sophomore Jill Bonk practice for a race.

Girls Soccer

Teamwork was the key to the success of this year's Lady Bears soccer team (18-4-1). According to captain senior Dana Pepe, "This season was a lot better than other seasons because there was less tension and more cooperation." The Lady Bears were not only named GMC Red Division Champions, but were ranked fifth in the nation by the NSCAA Gatorade Poll.

Field Hockey

Although this year's field hockey team ended the season with a 5-12 record, key players seniors Maricar Acab and senior Jill Hetman still emerged with Home News All-Area Second Team honors; juniors Gina Olivero and Maureen Regan received Third Team honors. Gina said, "We expected to do really well this year, but our fantasy was soon broken down by reality. But the new assistant coach [Kelly Richards] will help us a lot next year."

Boys Gymnastics

The talents of seniors Dave Dupler and Darin Elkins, junior Andrew Fox, and sophomore Josh Freedman enabled this year's boys gymnastics team (4-2) to place fifth in the State Finals, where several members captured individual honors. In the All-Around Competition, Dave won first place while Andrew took home fifth. In the vault competition, Darin placed sixth.

Boys Soccer

Boys soccer team captains seniors Vic Tartara, Frank Pepe, and Greg Tharney led the Bears to victory in the state sectional championship. "Not bad," commented coach Dan Hayston, "considering 6 losses and 17 wins." The Bears lost the GMCs in the semifinals, and then the state championships to Westfield after a close game. Nevertheless, they finished their season ranked fifth.

Girls Cross Country

"All for one, and one for all" describes the 1991 girls cross country team, according to captain senior Rita Shah. "More people came out for the team and stuck with it this year, and it was really like one big happy family." The camaraderie among teammates, as well as the dedication of key runners seniors Rita Shah and Lisa Nicholas and sophomore Jeri Behrman, enabled coach Jim Balsamello's team to finish with a 4-3 record.

Winter sports: A look back

by Evan Bauman, Sanjay Hebbur, and Zack Stewart

Wrestling

Though, the wrestling team had a disappointing record (5-7), there were many individual bright spots. Freshman Marc Gensler boasted the most wins ever by an EBHS freshman. Junior Mike Capaddaro captured the district and county championship at the 130 pound weight class. Sophomore Eugene Lezark seized the regional championship at the 112 pound weight division.

Girls Basketball

Coach Reggie Carney and tri-captains senior Erica Weir and juniors Kara Motuskesy and Jan Przysup led the girls cagers to both the GMC and State finals. Season highlights include the achievements of Kara and Erica as the first-ever Lady Bear 1000-point scorers. In addition, Erica broke the school record for career rebounds with 959. Other major contributions to this year's team include senior Lori McGuiness and sophomores Katie Whalen, Colleen King, and Cortney Blore, who helped the team to a season record of 26-4.

Boys Basketball

Reaching beyond expectations in the 1991-92 season, the boys basketball team surprised many with a 16-11 record. Though losing a tight game to Bishop Ahr in the quarterfinals of the GMC's and being defeated in the second round of the States' to Bridgewater, their season did include some bright spots. The biggest moment came when they beat St. Joe's, the number one team in the county at the time. Senior guard Brett Fischer stated, "We played as a team, not as individuals. And, because we combined the talents we had, we achieved more than we were expected to." As next season approaches, the team will look to be led by the experience of juniors Rich Kutza and Matt Berliner.

Boys Winter Track

Coach Kevin McEvoy is very proud of the boys track team despite their 2-4 record. He stated, "Although we did not perform exceptionally well as a team, we did have quite a few exceptional individual athletes." Senior Tony Yoseloff excelled in the half-mile, while senior David Burke was consistent in running the quarter-mile.

Girls Winter Track

Unlike their male counterparts, the girls track team posted an exceptional record of 6-0 and went on to capture the GMC championship. Coach Brian Merrigan stated, "We have many experienced seniors and also many talented underclassmen." Senior Rita Shah and freshman Jeanne Rabbie excelled in distance events while senior Amy Manuel made her mark as a sprinter.

Bowling

For both the boys and girls bowling teams, this year was a success for individuals, as well as for the whole team. The girls team finished the year with a 15-9 record. Wendy Hastings posted the highest scoring average on the team with a 173. "For a very small team we did very well," said sophomore Kacey Knesel. The boys team earned a 18-10 record with a number of individual standouts. Junior Chris Burke and senior Wayne Lyons led the team with the highest average scores.

Swimming

The boys and girls swim teams finished with an 8-7 dual meet record. According to coach Bill Pellagrino, "We could have done better . . . although we did have many individual standouts." For example, senior Art Yang excelled in the free style, and junior V.J. Mischutin performed well in the backstroke. Standouts on the girls team included junior breaststroker Irene Small and junior freestroker Lori Derr. Junior Debra Simon and sophomore Amy Reiss had excellent diving seasons.

Senior Scott Miller has cleared six feet this season.

Spring sports recap

by Allison Gold, Kimberly Eng, and Laura Papania

Golf

The golf team had an outstanding season, finishing with a perfect 13-0 record. Senior Chris Mazzuchetti, one of the key components of the team, stated, "The most important strategy for the team is for each player to be consistent in his personal game." Coach Robert Henning also stressed the individual nature of this sport. He said, "There's no one else to blame. It's just you vs. the course."

Girls Softball

Despite a disappointing 5-11 record, the season was not a total loss for the girls softball team. Second year coach Reggie Carney said, "This season the girls made it a lot of fun, and they have tremendous pride." Some distinguished members of the team are seniors Theresa Carzima, Veronica Pocsik, Jessica Huber, Nicole Intoccia, Jen Muller, Jen Putnam, Tammy Bagamary, and sophomore Jodi Brothers.

Boys Track

Though the boys spring track team's 4-3 record is not indicative of a highly-successful season, memorable victories were earned against J.P. Stevens and St.

Joseph's. The boys placed fourth in the GMC relays and seventh in the individual competition. Senior Tony Yoseloff, junior Greg Hendler, and sophomore Mike O'Reilly made their marks in the distance events, while senior Varnell Johnson and freshman LaRue Riecks starred in sprints.

Baseball

Coach Tom Hockenjos led the Bears to a victorious record of 13 and 11. "This has been an up and down season," explained Hockenjos. On the down side, the team suffered two defeats against Edison, one of the best teams in the state.

The team has also suffered injuries, such as that of senior pitcher Tom Bonk. On the up side, the team was able to qualify for the state tournament, and played well in the GMC Tournament.

Girls Track

The girls spring track team ended its season with a perfect 5-0 record. In the GMC Tournament, the girls placed third in the relay competition and fifth in the individual component. Outstanding distance runners include senior Rita Shah and juniors Traci Muriello and Chrissy McLauthlin. Senior Amy Manuel, sophomore Ajita Ranadive, and freshman Keri Herman were key sprinters, while freshman Jeanne Rabbie and junior Lisa Rabbie were talented hurdlers.

Boys Tennis

The Bears finished their season with the grand-slam power of champions. During the regular season, the team suffered only one defeat to J.P. Stevens. However, they redeemed themselves in the NJSIAA Sectional Finals, where they defeated the Hawks 5 to 0. Adding to their long list of accomplishments, the team won the GMC Tournament for the fourth year and scored a first time win at the Newark Academy Invitational.
